

Prophetic Word: July Will Be a Month of Divine Reintroduction and Fresh Vision

In a striking prophetic word, Tomi Arayomi is declaring that the Spirit of God is calling His people into a season of divine reintroduction where fresh vision is granted to those who earnestly seek Him.

"My people have forgotten what I look like," Arayomi says. He then declares that God is, "...not dead. I'm still alive."

This isn't merely a word of correction, but of invitation. The Lord is beckoning His people into a deeper intimacy, one that goes beyond religious habit or routine. "All they need to do is ask Me," Arayomi prophesies. And in this coming month, Arayomi believes God will reveal Himself again to those willing to see with new eyes.

"I am reintroducing Myself to My people," Arayomi says. This reintroduction isn't about God changing—it's about our perception shifting. The Lord is calling His people into a "new place of honor" so they may receive a "new place of sight."

God is not a forgotten relic of the past. He is the living God, waiting on a people who will cry out with hunger: "Give us eyes to see and ears to hear!" Right now, He is breathing life into dry places, reviving spiritual senses dulled by routine and overfamiliarity.

"You cannot access Me where familiarity is," Arayomi prophesies. In other words, when we become complacent with our idea of who God is—boxed in by past encounters or limited theology—we cut ourselves off from new revelations of His nature. This word shakes the soul awake: God wants to be known anew.

Where dreams have been forgotten and visions have been lost in the fog, clarity is coming. The promise is clear: "I will bring revival to the one who asks Me for revival. I will bring awakening to the one who asks Me for awakening."

As Arayomi notes, there is a cost to the coming revival. Arayomi prophetically asks, "Who can stand before Me and see Me?" The answer? Those with clean hands and a pure heart.

Holiness is not optional in this move of God—it is the standard. It is through holiness that the people will see God again. "Holiness will be the standard through which people see Me again," Arayomi prophesies.

This July, God is inviting His people into a sacred reintroduction—a call to lay down familiarity and rise into fresh vision, holiness and intimacy with Him. For those who will ask, seek and consecrate themselves, revival and awakening await. Now is the time to see Him as you've never seen Him before.
