

This LA Rams Player Reveals the Prophecy From God of Their Super Bowl Win

Los Angeles Rams wide receiver Cooper Kupp capped off a successful, record-breaking season with a Super Bowl win and the distinct honor of being named the game's Most Valuable Player.

Kupp said Sunday night after his team beat the Cincinnati Bengals 23-20 that he believes God revealed a vision to him in 2019 after the Rams lost to the Patriots. The vision showed him his team would make it to a future Super Bowl and that he would be designated the MVP.

"I don't know what it was, there was just this vision that God revealed to me that we were going to come back, we were going to be a part of a Super Bowl, we were going to win it," he said. "And somehow—somehow I was going to walk off the field as the MVP of the game."

Kupp, an outspoken Christian, said he shared the vision with his wife and no one else. He also added that he played each game this season with that belief in the back of his mind.

"It was written already and I just got to play free knowing that I got to play for victory, not for victory," he said. "I got to play in a place where I was validated not from anything that happened on the field but because of my worth in God, in my Father."
