

What Kim Clement Predicted for 2025 Is Coming True

The late Kim Clement has proven to be one of the most accurate prophetic voices of our generation, even after his passing. Now, it appears that what Clement saw happening for 2025 is coming to pass.

Back in 2015, Clement prophesied about a spiritual revival that would hit none other than the White House. This included removing all corruption from this place of power.

“I will remove from this office those who have corrupted the truth and lied and spoken to the enemies at the gate as if they were their friends. This has insulted Me,’ says the Lord. ‘Therefore, I will give you peace. I will give you righteousness,” Clement prophesied. “Therefore, I will give you peace. I will give you righteousness. And there shall arise men and women that shall pray in the White House, and they shall bring the latter rain into this nation and onto the earth.”

This certainly appears to be coming to pass right now as time of revival has hit the White House with multiple prayers, worships and even the initiatives to create a Faith Office has taken place since Trump’s second term began.

Another one of the key factors we see playing out in 2025 that Clement prophesied about was the rise of an “Esther.” Right now, Erika Kirk certainly seems to fit this bill as she has been the one to “...take the oil of healing,” as Clement prophesied, while the nation would be in the middle of mourning.

Clement also prophesied that there would be a league of men who would be trying to play God, giving a stark warning to Kim Jong Un in North Korea and Vladimir Putin. This prophecy has also come back to the forefront in 2025 as Russia, China and North Korea met together to show off their military power and spoke with one another about how to artificially ensure long-lasting life.

From revival at the White House to the rise of prophetic figures like Erika Kirk, the fulfillment of Clement’s 2025 vision is a vivid reminder that God’s Word does not return void even when it takes time for His promises to be fulfilled.
