

A Prophetic Word for White Witches Worshipping Earth

When people think of witches, many see images of old hags with nose warts and black-pointy hats—or they recall some mystical TV character Hollywood conjured up.

But beyond darkness-driven witches that curse and hex presidents, a new breed of witches is putting a fanciful spin on entertainment clichés.

Indeed, we're seeing an iconic, outspoken sorceress sincerely pleading for witch rights. Her name is Lady Rhea.

This high priestess and "Witch Queen of New York" is the proud founder of the Witch Pride Parade, which reports "marches across New York City every summer to fight for acceptance in society, and leads to WitchFest, a festival celebrating witches."

"[Being] A witch means we are earth worshippers, having the sacred space to invoke the gods to descend and be with us, to have the opportunities to give them praise, to give them love, to give them recognition," Rhea told . "I love magic, and I love to help people."

Listening to her speak, Lady Rhea seems like a kind woman who means no harm to anyone at all. She certainly comes across kinder and more loving than the heresy hunters that constantly attack preachers in the name of Christ. She made a convincing plea to and caused me to see another side of what some may call "white witches."

Though I disagree with their beliefs and practices, I felt the Lord's love for them.

Of course, Lady Rhea has a right to believe as she chooses, but I can't ignore Exodus 20:3, the words God gave the Israelites after He delivered them from oppression: "You shall have no other gods before me."

Still, God loves the white witch who worships the earth He created—and He wants them to know Him.

"People need to understand we're not demonologists, we are not Satanists, we are not anti-anything. We are earth worshippers, and we want to worship our own gods without people going through persecution," Rhea told . "This is solidary for all religions."

Rhea told she grew up in church. "I'm still to this day a very great Mary worshipper. I love the Christ, and His teachings, they are beautiful."

In pondering Rhea and those like her, the Lord spoke to me. I am offering this as a prophetic word to white witches from Creator God:

"I created you in My image, and I love you with a passion. Look for me in the earth you worship—the earth I created—and you will find Me. You will see me in nature and in the sky and in the birds of the air—My creation. If you look closely, you will see that my handiwork is undeniable and my creative power unspeakable. I love you with a passion. Turn to me and you will find peace and power to reach a generation of people searching for the supernatural. You can be a change agent in the earth. Ask Me to show You my glory and wait to see what happens next."
