

‘America Lost’ Documentary Highlights Americans’ Resilience, Faith and Dedication

The COVID-19 pandemic isn’t just a public health issue. It’s expected to expand poverty abroad and here at home with millions still out of work and businesses shuttering.

A new documentary titled America Lost records the decline of three U.S. cities pre-COVID: Youngstown, Ohio; Memphis, Tennessee; and Stockton, California.

Produced by the Discovery Institute and The Heritage Foundation, it shows people committed to changing the cities where they live and work through faith, family and community, rather than riots.
