

Are We in More Danger With Obama out of Office Than in?

I was given permission from a trusted minister friend of mine, John Fenn, to share things he'd recently received from the Lord in both voice and vision form.

"The president and his policies will be more dangerous after he leaves office than when he was in" and "The collapse will come when conservatives are in charge."

Here is the vision that went with that word:

It was a vision of a playground slide with a man in a suit I knew represented conservatives' efforts, trying to climb the slide, but every time he got part of the way up, he would slide right down again, representing efforts to control entitlement programs and the budget expenses of the nation. I expect, from that word, that progress will be made, but it won't be smooth sailing, and it will have setbacks.

Here's another vision that went with this word:

As the Father was speaking: I was flying (I thought just me at first, but then I realized I was in an airplane that represented the body of Christ in the U.S.), looking over the nation, between cloud layers, in safety and sunshine (Sonshine), and between two layers as the Father spoke.

The bottom layer, closest to the ground, was what He told me he (Obama) would be doing in the cities to organize and move things around in terms of voting districts and people in the near future, and being smart about how they plan to change the nation. That is the main point; He said that he will be working to rearrange voting districts and pulling together formerly disconnected or loosely connected people into an organized movement and network across the big cities, which will be in place to stir civil unrest in the future.

He kept saying he and they were going to be “smart” about it—and the emphasis was on the organizing of demonstrations and dogged pursuit of change against the “normal” American culture. Much of it would be unseen by most, and all this was what the bottom cloud layer was about. It was an attempt at a grass-roots organizing of protests for the purpose of breaking down society in opposition to what others are trying to do.

As He spoke, it was like a playback of a highlights film before me, of instances when people disagreed with the president and he accused those who disagreed with him of being racist or homophobic and so on, unwilling to discuss issues intellectually, so he fell back to personal accusations directed to those who opposed his ideas.

Suddenly I saw him behind the scene in a puppet stage pulling strings unseen as a puppeteer using agencies and individuals to harass Christians and conservatives (these are just main points and not the details). And I heard the Father say, “Now imagine taking that to a local level and organizing people who believe those things into a nationwide network.” Only then did I get the scope of what He was showing me. The cloud covered most of the land, heaviest in the eastern part of the U.S. at first but almost in the Midwest equally so.

The top layer of the cloud not visible from the ground was the new administration, and there was a separation between the two cloud layers, as I said, with us flying in between. The bottom layer was doing one thing and the top layer was doing another, with me (us) flying in between.

This is the most important part for us: I was totally in peace. I was between those layers, between the ugliness in the unrest in the cities and society and between the government's agenda: I (we) were in sunshine (Sonshine) in a safe place and flying (a type of going-about-life) in smooth air.

About two days after this word from the Father, who usually shows me the big picture while the Lord shows me things pertaining to His body, the Lord started talking to me about what would be going on in the body of Christ in this time, both in the U.S. and around the world.

In the U.S., He said church buildings—not just conservatives, Christians and Jews, but houses of worship—will be attacked, and there is coming a time when many will not feel safe going to church. He spoke of the continued rise of family and home-based churches. As He spoke, a vision played out before me:

He and I were suddenly in someone's living room, standing more in the corner of the room while several people were talking, eating and playing with kids who were playing with some toy just off-center in the room. As they talked and some interacted with the small children, the Lord started pointing to different ones in the room, noting their particular differences theologically and emotionally with others in the room.

I won't share the details of what He said of each person in case what He was showing me was real people at some future time, but He pointed to a man and noted he had some end-times beliefs that were different than anyone else's in that church. He pointed to a woman who had strife issues with another woman in the room. He pointed to another couple and talked of their marriage difficulties, and so on around the room, including questions and hurts some of the children had.

And then He stopped and turn fully toward me saying, "But in that day, none of these things will matter. The days of luxury this nation and much of the world has had to dwell on differences of doctrine and arguments between themselves, are over. He was smiling as He talked, and I got the feeling He was thinking, Finally! when He continued.

“Love will become the focus and many will grow up in that day and know what is truly important, which they’ve actually known all along but have stubbornly stuck to their childish ways. But there will be still more who have been caught up in the world and petty strife and things that never were important, and they will be afraid and insecure when they see such things around them. Thinking they have been people of faith, they will discover they were not, for they will have no peace. This is one way you’ll know them—they won’t have peace but have placed their faith in man and man’s doctrines and not in Me nor those who mind the things of Me. In that day, be gracious to those who repent, and watch that your heart not be hardened against them, though they knew all along the path to walk.”

We have long talked what would happen in the U.S. if conservatives ever grew a backbone and put controls on federal spending and how those who are used to getting things for free would rebel. Think that through Americans. But I also know there will be others who will rise up to confront some of the demonstrations and rioting that will come on this nation ... a battle for the soul of the U.S. is about to be engaged.

Pray some of these things will be lessened or not happen at all.
