

Beth Moore: Christians Who Proudly Reject the 'Prosperity Gospel' Are Embracing the 'Pampering Gospel'

This past week, Christians gathered from all over to celebrate Martin Luther King's life and legacy in Memphis, Tennessee. The Southern Baptist Convention's Ethics & Religious Liberty Commission and The Gospel Coalition put on the "MLK50 Conference," headlined by Matt Chandler, Jackie Hill Perry, Eric Mason, Russell Moore, John Piper and Benjamin Watson.

Beth Moore, founder of Living Proof Ministries in Houston, Texas, sat on a panel called "Evangelicals and the Future of Racial Unity."

Moore condemned the "prosperity gospel," as many Christians do, and then surprised people by what she said next. She called Christians out for subscribing to a pampering gospel, one that makes them feel safe and keeps them in the confines of their comfort zones. {eo}
