

Bill Wiese: What Could Be Worse Than the Virus?

The COVID-19 virus has people obsessed with the fear of getting sick and even worse, dying. They are preparing for what they believe could be the worst. The current state of our country has alarmed millions, instilling a deep fear of sickness and possibly death.

Yet most don't think beyond that. People are rushing about, buying masks and avoiding other people for fear of transferring what could be a fatal disease.

But shouldn't we concern ourselves with the afterlife and where we will spend eternity?

We are all going to die at some point. There is a life beyond this one, and few are making preparations. Many don't know where they will spend eternity, and yet they ignore the idea of researching and being prepared for when that day comes.

We may not die from a virus, but we will most certainly all die.

Will you do anything to prepare for that day?
