

City on Our Knees

TobyMac | Bethany House

TobyMac's song City on Our Knees took the Christian music world by storm, and so the musician took his lyrics one step further with this book, which "reflects the message of the song."

Instead of merely singing the line "when we step across the line, we can sail across the sea," he illustrates it with numerous stories of people who have stepped across lines of persecution, doubt, prejudice or despair to change the world one bit at a time.

From Augustine of Hippo to young Alexandra Scott and her lemonade stand, from John Wesley to Haiti earthquake survivor Dan Wooley, all have helped create a better world.

Many stories are familiar—George Mueller's orphanages, The Blind Side's Michael Oher's journey to football fame—but just as many aren't, such as Jeannine Brabon's work in a Colombian prison.

Yet all, including TobyMac with his own insights, will inspire readers with a strong message of action and love to step across the line.
