

Dinesh D'Souza Presents New, Credible Evidence of 2020 Election Fraud in New Documentary

A new documentary called 2000 Mules, created by conservative stalwart, author and filmmaker Dinesh D'Souza, exposes "widespread, coordinated voter fraud in the 2020 election"—enough, according to D'Souza, to "change the outcome" of the U.S. presidential election.

Premiered on Saturday, May 7, in a special livestream event that drew 80,000 viewers and now available on and Rumble, 2000 Mules is based on groundbreaking research conducted by the election integrity group True the Vote. Geotracking and surveillance video were used in an innovative way to show election fraud in action.

In less than 12 hours on the video streaming platform Rumble and its subscription-based platform called Locals, 2000 Mules grossed more than $1 million. The movie's gross sales on Rumble and Locals over the weekend put 2000 Mules in the estimated box office Top 10 for the weekend of May 6-8.

"The success of 2000 Mules on Rumble is a great sign for creators who do not want to be silenced or censored for their speech," says D'Souza, whose Locals community can be found at

As a prominent conservative with a pro-Christian stance, D'Souza has produced several documentaries, such as 2016: Obama's America and Death of a Nation, as well as written numerous books, including What's So Great about America and The End of Racism.

Eric Metaxas has strongly endorsed the 2000 Mules documentary.

"This film 2000 Mules is going to change American history. Once you see the film, you're going to know that the election was stolen by the Democrats. It has never happened in the history of this country that we had a vast operation dedicated to keeping the choice of 'we the people' out of the White House. When you see the details, and I don't care where you are politically, you're going to know this is called crime. It's un-American. It's anti-American."

The documentary's website, www.2000mules.com, states: "The geotracking evidence, based on a database of 10 trillion cell phone pings, exposes an elaborate network of paid professional operatives called mules delivering fraudulent and illegal votes to mail-in dropboxes in the five key states where the election was decided. Video evidence, obtained from official surveillance cameras installed by the states themselves, confirms the geotracking evidence. The movie concludes by exploring numerous ways to prevent the fraud from happening again."

Donald Trump, the 45th president of the United States, issued the following statement about 2000 Mules: "The movie exposes the lies of the Democrats, RINOs and fake news who say it was the 'most secure election in history.' It was, perhaps, the least secure in history. The ballot box was stuffed, and stuffed like never before—and it's all on video. Ballots were trafficked and sold in a massive operation in each swing state. The evidence is so damning, what will the cowards who sat and did nothing about the stolen election say now? The way our votes were taken away is a disgrace to our nation. It must be fixed."

Reaction to the documentary has been polarizing since its premiere last week. The secular mainstream media is, on the one hand, either trying to downplay, mock, "fact-check" or ignore this myth-shattering documentary. On the other hand, patriot voters who saw the film are taking to Twitter with the hashtag #2000mules to express their outrage and make calls for new investigations into election fraud before the Big Tech companies potentially censor them.

Benny Johnson, host of The Benny Show on podcast platforms and a social media influencer with over 600,000 Twitter followers, tweeted out:

Congratulations to @DineshDSouza on the success of his film '2000 Mules'.

The evidence revealed in this movie is real and deserves to be seriously investigated by law enforcement.

In light of this credible evidence, Metaxas adds, “Pray for America.” {eo}
