

Doctor Thought He ‘Saw a Ghost’: Deathbed Miracle Stuns Medical Experts

Popular author Lee Strobel is preparing to once again explore the supernatural in his new film “The Case For Miracles,” hitting theaters Dec. 15-18.

Strobel told CBN News he believes Christmas is the perfect time to release a movie about God’s supernatural power.

“A lot of people who are spiritually curious become more curious around Christmas because all of this activity in the culture [is] focused on December the 25th,” he said. “And they begin to wonder, ‘What is this really all about? What does it really mean?’ And so forth.”

Strobel continued, “So I think that people are more spiritually open this time of year, and I think it’s a perfect time to do a film that looks at the credibility that God is still in the miracle business today.”

“The Case For Christ” author said that his exploration of the supernatural has deepened and enlarged his faith, especially the realization that God is still moving today.

“The fact He’s still doing miracles today in ways where we’ve got solid medical documentation, where we have multiple incredible eyewitnesses with no motive to deceive, where we have no natural explanation that makes any sense whatsoever,” he said. “And it takes place in the context of prayer, where we have those four conditions met. I think it’s logical and rational to conclude that God has intervened supernaturally. And when that happens, you're just in awe."

Strobel shared some of the most compelling stories he encountered, noting his favorite involved a woman named Barbara. She was struck with multiple sclerosis as a teenager and "deteriorated very quickly."

"We've got medical records all documenting her case, to the point where several years later she's in hospice," he said. "She's on her deathbed, curled up like a pretzel – rigid, one lung collapsed, the other lung at 50%, a tube in her throat."
