

Donald Trump Visits Robert Morris' Gateway Church to Discuss Racism, Police

President Donald Trump held a discussion on race and policing at the Dallas campus of Robert Morris' Gateway Church last night.

Despite its setting, the roundtable event, titled "Transition to Greatness: Restoring, Rebuilding and Renewing," focused more on politics than on spiritual matters, though Trump did refer to Morris and Bishop Harry Jackson as "great people with a great reputation" and asked Morris to open the panel with prayer. During the event, Trump repeated calls for law enforcement to "dominate the streets" in response to protests.

Stream the full roundtable discussion here: