

Elderly Man Preaching Gospel on Subway Brutally Attacked by 'Transgendered Lady'

Editor's Note: Reader's discretion is advised as the video showing the actual attack contains unwholesome language.

An elderly man preaching on a New York subway was brutally attacked, according to several witnesses.

FOX 5 reports that the gentleman was reading his Bible aloud when the suspect attacked him. One witness, @, posted a video of the incident showing a woman with long red hair walking up to the 79-year-old man and hitting him with her stiletto, yelling, "[expletive] your God!"

The same person posted another video revealing the elderly man after the attack, still clutching his Bible and sopping blood from his head and face. His shirt appears to be covered in blood in the front.

"What a world we live in that some people see preaching the word of God as a threat to their lives," the witness posted on Instagram. "This old man right here was just singing some gospel songs and sharing the word of God to people on the train, he didn't say anything to hurt anyone, he wasn't even loud, you could barely hear him talk but this is what he got in return from a transgendered Lady. Who hit him on the head with her heels, threw his Bible away and no one didn't do anything to help but to look at this old man bleed.

"It's just so annoying because this old man was far away from Her....I was just so mad and I felt I needed to do something to help him because he was bleeding too much.

He's just an old man..... he doesn't deserve this ...Justice is needed. Please tag the right people who needs to see this

...this old man needs justice because the lady got away see the next post to see how terrified this old man was"

See the full post below: