

Grand News: I'll Be a Granddad Soon!

A few times in life there is such great news that you want to tell everyone. Today is such a day. I've just found out my son Cameron and his wife, Maya, will make me a granddad next October. Maya went to the doctor today for her 12-week sonogram.

For me the only way to get out the news quickly is to share it with the 26,000 who read my Strang Report each week. So I hope you'll rejoice with me on this grand news, even though it's so personal in nature and not the usual commentary on social issues that I usually deal with.

Next week the Strang Report will begin coming out twice a week instead of just weekly.

And I now have a twitter account. If you were following me at , you would have received this grand news a few hours ago.

God bless you and have a grand weekend.

Steve Strang