

'I've Been to the Mountaintop': Martin Luther King Jr. Speaks Prophetically in Final Address

In the final speech delivered by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the civil rights advocate spoke out on April 3, 1968, against what he called "totalitarian" denial of First Amendment rights. He also spoke prophetically in a way that seems to refer to his assassination, which took place the next day, as well as to America's future.

He gave the speech at the Church of God in Christ headquarters, the Mason Temple in Memphis, Tennessee.

"I don't know what will happen now," King tells the assembled crowd in this clip. "But it really doesn't matter with me now—because I've been to the mountaintop.

"Like anybody, I would like to live a long life," he says. "Longevity has its place. But I'm not concerned about that now. I just want to do God's will, and He's allowed me to go up to the mountain, and I've looked over and I've seen the promised land. I may not get there with you, but I want you to know tonight that we as a people will get to the promised land."

For more of King's inspiring words, watch the video clip from "I've Been to the Mountaintop" above or at this link. {eo}

✖ For more information on how you can fight back against cancel culture, make sure to get a copy of what Charisma founder and CEO Stephen Strang says is his most important book yet. God and Cancel Culture, released Sept. 7, is now available wherever fine books are sold. Order it at .

Read articles like this one and other Spirit-led content in our new platform, CHARISMA PLUS.