

John Kilpatrick Calls Kim Clement's 2007 Trump Prophecy 'A Done Deal'

John Kilpatrick, founder and senior pastor of Church of His Presence, recently reacted to a 2007 prophecy by Kim Clement that's gone viral over the last couple days. In the prophecy, Clement says a coming U.S. president will be baptized in the Holy Spirit, build walls around the country and get elected to a second term.

On The Jim Bakker Show, Kilpatrick responded, "I've got news for Miss Pelosi, and I've got news for Brother Schumer. If Kim Clement prophesied that he's going to build the walls—he said he will put walls of security up around this country—then I believe that's a done deal. I don't know how this is going to break, but it's going to break in his favor, I believe, and I believe those walls will be built."

Clement also said during his interview that the drama in Washington, D.C., is just a distraction from end-times prophecies being fulfilled in the Middle East. Watch the video here.