

Listen to Mark Taylor's Latest Prophecies About President Trump

Mark Taylor is not your normal prophet. He's never been to Bible School or seminary. Instead, he's a third-generation firefighter who retired several years ago.

Then in 2011, he felt the Lord told him that Donald Trump would be a future U.S. president. You've probably heard about him or read about him in my new book, God and Donald Trump. We also have written about him and his incredible story previously online as well as in print.

Of course, against all odds the prophecy came true in 2016—although when he received the revelation, Mark assumed it was meant for 2012.

Now Mark is making new predictions, and they're the subject of today's Strang Report podcast. He repeats some of the prophecies at the end of his book and is sharing others for the first time.

I believe you will find this a fascinating interview that you will want to share. He makes some bold predictions about Supreme Court nominations and also what will happen with some high-profile leaders. Some people will consider these latest prophecies a bit outlandish. Of course, time will tell if Mark is right. As is always the case with prophecy, the body of Christ should test this prophetic word. (Of course in 2011, the thought that Donald Trump would become president was outlandish.)

By the way, if you haven't already, I encourage you to read his book, The Trump Prophecies—co-authored with my friend, Mary Colbert. I read it after I had finished the manuscript for my book and found it very interesting. His take on the election is quite different from what I share in my book, but still one I recommend.

As always, leave your comments and share with friends. {eoa}