

Mike Bickle Shares About Roman Catholicism, NAR, Kansas City Prophets and More

I thank God for the wonderful work that many ministries are doing to promote unity—I wish there were more, but is there a troubling trend in the evangelical church to unite with Rome? We are encouraged to be at peace with all men, even with those who have different beliefs, but the Bible also encourages us to boldly and confidently present a scriptural basis for truth and compare differences—to be peacemakers but not religious negotiators. In our zeal to reach the masses, are we running the risk of quenching the Spirit?

I love Roman Catholics, and I believe there are many Christians within their ranks, but, because of major theological issues, I don't believe that we can share the stage at worship events. How can we be united when we are divided on fundamental truths? I could have lunch with them and work with them on issues such as abortion, but when it comes to a worship conference and elevating them on the stage, are we sending the wrong message?

I had the privilege of doing a phone interview on this topic with Pastor Mike Bickle, with Todd Coconato moderating. Proverbs encourages us to hear both sides before forming judgments. We also briefly talked about the NAR and a few other hot topics. The audio on YouTube can be found here.

It can also be heard on Apple's "Remnant Godcast" here (subscribe while there). You can also subscribe to my new podcast, "Idleman Unplugged" on Apple and Podbean where I talk about controversial topics from a biblical perspective such as politics, alcohol, emotional worship, female pastors and more.
