

Nephilim and the Antichrist Spirit: The Shocking Link to Turkey's Past

What if the pieces of biblical prophecy were coming together in real-time, hidden in the ruins of ancient civilizations and the geopolitical shifts of today?

In a recent conversation with Charisma Media, Rabbi Jason Sobel laid out a fascinating case connecting the Antichrist spirit, the days of Noah and mysterious archaeological discoveries in Turkey.

Rabbi Sobel makes it clear: "The Antichrist is the man of lawlessness. I believe he tries to create lawlessness, he tries to create chaos in order to take control." That spirit of lawlessness is not only rising today, but Sobel argues that its roots stretch deep into history, possibly even to Turkey's ancient sites, some of which are believed to be Nephilim cities.

Turkey's Mysterious Past and a Prophetic Future

Turkey is a land rich with biblical history—it holds the Mountains of Ararat, where Noah's Ark landed. But recent archaeological discoveries are raising new questions. Could some of these sites be linked to the Nephilim, the hybrid giants mentioned in Genesis 6? Sobel sees a compelling connection: "If the ark is in what is modern-day Turkey, and you have these ancient cities that are unexplainable that seem to be connected to the Nephilim... this all seems to be coming full circle.”

He pointed to Jesus’ own words about the end times: “As it was in the days of Noah, so will it be in the days of the Son of Man.” What happened before the flood—when the Nephilim roamed the earth and wickedness abounded—will be mirrored in the last days.

What’s even more interesting is Turkey’s unique geopolitical role. “Turkey kind of straddles the Islamic world and the European world... they’re this interesting bridge between the two.” This dual identity raises a crucial question: Could the Antichrist emerge from Turkey, an area that connects East and West?
