

Pastor Leaves Christianity Behind With Viral Rant—And Then Deacon Reveals His Secret Sin

Dave Gass, formerly the lead pastor at Grace Family Fellowship, a church in Missouri, recently took to social media to announce his decision to leave the church, his faith and his family behind.

In a series of agitated tweets, Gass described why he left the church, starting with the fact that the Christian faith is filled with abuse, which caused him “mental and emotional breaks.”

After receiving thousands of interactions on Twitter, it has now come to light by a deacon in the church, that consequently, Gass had an affair with a married woman and never repented for it.

Gass, whose tweets are now protected, shared a thread to Twitter, detailing not only why he was walking away from his church, but from his faith altogether.

Click here to read the rest of this story from our content partners at Faithwire.