

Pentecostal Theologian to Church: You're Worshipping False Gods and You Don't Even Know It

James K.A. Smith, a self-described Pentecostal Calvinist, teaches about the spiritual power underlying our daily habits. In this lecture at Wheaton College, Smith demonstrates how what we love shapes our character and even our soul—but many times, the things we believe we love are not the things we truly love. Our true loves are revealed by our habits, and misplaced habits can become liturgies for our own false gods. So what do your habits say about you? Find out by watching this short teaching.