

Prophetic Word On The Great Exchange In The Housing Industry Crisis

Read Time: 2 minutes 10 seconds

The future of the housing market across the country is uncertain. Many Americans are wondering if they should buy now or wait to see what happens with the economy. Prophet Troy Black was spending time worshipping God when the Lord spoke to him about what is to come.

“Like cattle being led into the slaughter house, people will be let go, one after another. A great exchange is taking place in the industry in general,” Troy Black said in his YouTube video.

Experts are unclear on the trends to come in the housing market and Dave Ramsey even called the predictions about “as reliable as weather forecasts.”

In the third quarter of 2022, there are still a lot of buyers looking for their dream home. Black’s word sheds light on the future of the industry and those who are working hard to make a living.

“In the next few years, there will be three major industries that appear to trade labor overnight,” Black says. The New York Times reported the housing industry drew more workers during the pandemic than nearly every other job sector, but the future for those agents is dim. The New York Times predicts that as little as 10% of the new agents will last long enough to make a full-time living. This lines up with Black’s prophetic word from God.

“People are even going to be reverting to legal action to maintain their jobs,” Black says. He feels the purpose of the word is to warn those agents out there in the housing industry and Christians in general.

Throughout life when we feel like we have been wronged we immediately try to vindicate ourselves and fight back. As believers our example is Jesus who was wrongfully accused and murdered for our sins and yet never once stood up for Himself through it. He took our debt that we deserved to pay and He atoned for it Himself.

God is your defender and He will fight your battles on your behalf. In Exodus, Moses goes to the people of Israel who were worrying and fearing the coming Egyptian army. Despite God’s deliverance out of Egypt they started to question the Lord and if He would leave them for dead. They even questioned leaving their slavery and bondage. Moses tells them that God will fight for them, they need to only be still and trust in Him.

The Red Sea was before the Israelites, and it appeared to be an impossible situation. God delivered Israel from the hands of their enemy when He parted the sea and wiped out the Egyptian army.

No matter what you are facing today in your home life, workplace, friendships or adversaries, God is fighting for you. He sees the injustice that has been done to you and He is the Redeemer of all things. Whether you have lost a job or are weathering another storm you can strengthen your faith when you trust in Him. He will use all things for good. {eoa}
