

‘The Most Exciting Experience God Has Ordained for Georgia’

Tens of thousands are expected to gather at of Stone Mountain in Atlanta, Georgia, this weekend to publicly intercede to unite the church’s deep divisions and repent for the historic sin of racism.

OneRace, scheduled for 10 a.m. ET, has been marked by a massive fast and will culminate with a “Millennial Ascent.”

“Thousands of young adults will ascend to the top of Stone Mountain to renounce racism and dead religion, and covenant together to move forward through reconciliation and revival,” according to the website. “We will resolve to live lives of holiness and to move forward in works of justice!”

With less than 24 hours until the official event, organizers are at the site preparing for what they have declared as “the most exciting experience God has ordained for Georgia.”
