Cahn first points out that we see throughout Scripture how curses were mentioned, and frequently if the people of Israel would not act in obedience to the Word of God. He also warns against praying "prayers of curses" as they resemble the occult and witchcraft too much for Christians to take part in. He then answers what curses mean in regards to the Christian believer.

"The big question: Can you be affected by a curse as a believer?" Cahn asks. "Yes, you can be affected. The creation was placed under a curse. The entire world has a curse; you're in a cursed world. If you're in this world, you're in a cursed world. It has sin, it has sickness, it has tears, it is has death; there's a curse."

"Can there be generational curses? Some believers get too much into it and much of it's speculation, but there can be in these senses," he continues. "One: There can be demonic forces that focus on a people or even a , there are lines of cause and effect that can go in families."

However, Cahn believes it is important to recognize that a generational situation is different than a direct curse placed on someone by God.

“God doesn’t hold you accountable for what someone else did,” Cahn says.

So, if curses, regardless of the type, are real, then how can we break their chains over our lives?

One action Cahn says not to do is curse other people. This includes gossiping as well. Instead of following in the same pattern as the world, Cahn believes it is imperative to do this because as Christians we are meant to bless those who curse us.
