

WATCH: Sean Feucht's 'Let Us Worship' Documentary

Sean Feucht's "Let Us Worship" events have swept across the nation and documented revival in leaps and bounds.

What began as a protest against the state of California's July 29 ban on worshipping in church has taken on a greater identity—drawing people into the open to accept, celebrate and experience the power of God.

And as the worship rallies have progressed in the nationwide campaign, it seems nothing can stop the Holy Spirit's move.

After receiving a prophetic word to document the goings-on of the movement, filmmaker Sondra Martin Hicks followed Feucht's worship events, traveling with him to the last few stops before the culmination at the National Mall on Oct. 25.

Her work as well as others' contributed to the making of a documentary of the events from California to Texas to Minnesota. It can be viewed on Sean Feucht's YouTube page here.

The documentary features the most powerful of moments from the "worship protest" rallies.

Watch the short clip of the documentary here.