

What 'Looking Out for the Left Out' Really Looks Like

We know what the Lord wants from us; His Word makes it clear.

He delights when we do justice, adore mercy and move with humility (Mic. 6:8).

But what does this actually look like when we put into practice today?

Jon Jorgenson, an author, speaker and spoken word poet, portrays this image in the performance of "a poem for those who have been left out." The Chicago native and former Broadway actor provides a dynamic and creative experience enjoyed by audiences everywhere and hopes to provide a unique perspective into some of life's most perplexing puzzles.

Jorgenson partners with numerous organizations including Awana International, Moody Bible Institute, Compassion International and the Willow Creek Association, as well as hundreds of other churches, colleges and conferences all over the globe, according to his YouTube channel.

Listen to this powerful spoken word poem and learn more about how Compassion International implements all three of these principles around the world now.
