

What Made This Non-Christian First Start to Take the Bible Seriously

Phil Strout, national director of Vineyard USA, says when he was growing up, he was spiritually apathetic. He wasn't Christian, but he wasn't anti-Christian. He just didn't think about spiritual matters. Then Strout was introduced to the gospel and the Bible—not because of its history or all the apologetics in the world, but because he met people who truly believed it and lived it out. He explains his journey with the Bible in this video.
