

What to Do if You're Cancelled

Today, I'm writing because I need your help.

By now, you've probably heard of my most recent book, God and Cancel Culture, which I believe is my most important book yet.

I need your help to take what began with this book and begin a movement that will do just what the book's subtitle says: "Stand Strong Before It's Too Late."

This is so important I've decided to give this book to you for free. All I ask is that you help me out with the small cost of shipping ($). I'm offering this exclusively through Charisma, so you can ONLY get it here.

This special offer will expire after Thanksgiving, so you'll want to get your free copy today.

Let me fill you in on what's been happening ...

God and Cancel Culture released Sept. 7, and since that time, cancel culture has only gotten worse.

A recent email from Prager University announced that a new documentary they produced, Restricted: How Big Tech Is Taking Away Your Freedom is rapidly reaching millions—yet the Big Tech overlords are censoring it.

As I write about in my book, when even the president of the United States gets canceled on social media so he can't get his message out, we know the problem has reached new levels.

Even our own company has been canceled!

I tell the story in God and Cancel Culture of a book we published nearly 20 years ago by the Rev. Lou Sheldon called

The Gay Agenda. Almost exactly a year ago, someone at Amazon removed it from the site as if it never existed, and this is after selling thousands of copies. When we inquired, we got no explanation.

The same thing happened with my own book, God, Trump and the 2020 Election, which sold tens of thousands of copies on Amazon from the time it came out in January 2020. But from July through October, the four months leading up to the presidential election, Amazon removed the book's "buy" button and ordered zero copies, apparently removing any books they thought would help Donald Trump get reelected.

Believe it or not, we've also seen God and Cancel Culture get canceled.

We got a verbal order from Walmart for 9,000 copies early in the year, but the company then "declined" to carry it when it launched. We've also seen the rise of cancel culture during the COVID-19 pandemic.

This happened especially when churches and other houses of worship were closed. The media called churches and worship services "super spreaders," and state governments such as California's shut them down as much as possible.

Meanwhile, you could go to any of the "essential" big box stores, bars or even riots without restrictions such as having to wear masks or staying socially distanced. I document all this in the book.

The cancel culture has also tried to ruin businesses whose CEOs have ideas the cancel culture says are wrong, most famously Mike Lindell of MyPillow. Lindell was canceled, first because he supported Donald Trump, and then later because he had the audacity to question the integrity of the election. We need to stand up against the cancel culture by buying more of his products—and telling our friends and family to support him too.

Cancel culture wants us to shut up, sit down and not have an opinion unless it agrees with their leftist views.

We've had the idea of political correctness for a long time now, but this has taken it to new and ridiculous levels. Worse, it's aimed more and more at Christianity.

There are people right now who say basic Christian beliefs such as the sanctity of marriage are "hate speech" because they go against their leftist, liberal, anything-goes agenda. In fact, I believe the end goal is to stifle Christianity or to put it in a box where we don't even have the freedom to share the gospel. We can't allow that to happen.

Again, my book says we must stand strong before it's too late.

It's a manual on how to do just that, and as I watch the cancel culture grow, I have a passion to move from a book to a movement dedicated to having people of faith and principle stand up against this oppressive cancel culture that has become so much the norm.

As I said above ...

I believe it's important to get this book in your hands, so I'm giving it to you free. All you do is pay for shipping and handling. That's right. Since it's my book and my company I can make this offer! Plus I'm desperate to get this message out. So if you click the link below before Thanksgiving—that's only two days away—you can get your free copy:

But you must act now. The offer ends on Wednesday.

I've discovered that many people are concerned about what's happening, but they don't know what to do. This book explains what you can do.

✖ Through this movement, we can work together to stand against this cancel culture before it's too late.

I hope you'll not only buy the book but join the movement and share both the book and this podcast with anyone you know who is tired of seeing our traditional Judeo-Christian values canceled.

Together, we can cancel the cancel culture and stand up for our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. {eoa}
