

Why Sexual Abusers Should Be Both Forgiven and Judged

Rachael Denhollander rose to national prominence when she publicly accused Larry Nassar, the USA Gymnastics national team doctor, of sexually abusing her as a child. But Denhollander shocked many when, during her court appearance, she invoked her Christian faith to say she personally forgave Nassar. How can the person who first accused him also be the first to forgive him? Denhollander explained at a recent Liberty University Convocation. Watch it here.
