

Former New Age Leader Exposes How the Occult Is Infiltrating Christianity

New Age spirituality is not harmless self-help in church clothes. Steven Bancarz warns that its most dangerous elements hide in plain sight, packaged as wellness, peace and light that “looks good to Christians.”

“Satan wants to keep his identity concealed,” Bancarz said. “The point of coming as an angel of light is that an angel of light looks good to Christians.”

Bancarz’s credibility comes from hard experience. Raised in a Christian home, he became a prominent New Age teacher with a viral platform and significant income before a public conversion to Christ. He says his life then was marked by bondage and deception despite frequent “mystical” experiences. “It’s not everything that it promises. It cost me everything,” he said.

Today Bancarz urges churches to recognize how counterfeit spirituality slips past our defenses. He cites 2 Corinthians 11 and says false peace and false light often mimic the work of the Holy Spirit.
