

Witch Behind Charlie Kirk Curse Wants to Speak to Erika Kirk

Just days before his assassination, witches were paid by the left-wing website, Jezebel, to put curses on Charlie Kirk. Now, the witch who cursed Kirk is speaking out, and her understanding of the spiritual world is perhaps just as scary as the curses.

According to Yahoo News' Blast, the witch, priestess Lilin, is saying that she did not mean for physical harm to come Kirk's way, and would like to have a private conversation with Erika Kirk.

"We regret any distress experienced. What we do is done based on an impartial perspective and at a professional level," Lilin told the Daily Mail. "We respect the widow's feelings and welcome a private conversation to address her concerns."

Lilin reportedly did not believe that her spiritual curses could reap any physical harm on Kirk.

"Our spells are spiritual in nature and we do not perform actions that are intended to cause physical harm," said Lilin.

According to Blast, Lilin and another witch, Leamashtu, were contacted by Jezebel through Etsy. Their ritual supposedly included burning a picture of Kirk. After he died, Lilin said that, "...While we cannot and would not claim responsibility for Mr. Kirk's death, we do affirm the magic we work with in our daily lives is very real."

Perhaps one of the most horrifying things the witch said was that she believes: "Summoning demons and communicating with spirits were not inherently 'evil acts...' The spiritual community views demons as multi-faceted Spirits and not one-dimensional big bad evils. Mediumship is also perceived as an ethically neutral practice..."

This horrific curse was brought up to the Kirk's prior to Charlie's death, and the two had a Catholic priest pray over Charlie, as Megyn Kelly described.

This tragic situation is a sobering reminder that the spiritual realm is not a playground and that every action taken there carries real consequences. Scripture warns that "the thief comes only to steal and kill and destroy," and summoning demons and casting spells open doors to forces of darkness. Christians must be discerning, recognizing that what is called "ethically neutral" in occult circles is, in reality, participation with powers that oppose God.

The death of Charlie Kirk and the confessions of the witch who cursed him should serve as a wake-up call: engaging with occult practices is not harmless spirituality but an invitation to destruction. Believers must remain vigilant, prayerful and rooted in Christ—understanding that spiritual warfare is real and that dabbling in darkness can unleash consequences far beyond what anyone intends.
