

Will Trump's Pledge Stop the Proliferation of Porn?

In August, anti-porn group Enough Is Enough released a statement indicating that Trump had signed The Children's Internet Safety Presidential Pledge.

The pledge was created to defend the innocence and dignity of America's children by enforcing the existing federal laws and advancing public policies designed to

1. prevent the sexual exploitation of children online and
2. to make the internet safer for all.

While it is promising that Trump has taken a stand on pornography, 68 percent of church-going men still view porn on a regular basis.

Jeremy Wiles who directed a Cinematic DVD Series that helps men break free from porn, says, "The church can't leave dealing with pornography up to government when so many of its members and so many of its pastors are viewing it on a regular basis.

"The church has to take a stand on the issue of pornography by providing sexual discipleship. Thankfully we are seeing thousands of churches starting to make this a regular part of their ministry through the Conquer Series."

For most people struggling with pornography, it has been a part of their lives for a matter of years, so it is not just going to go away overnight. Dr. Roberts describes recovery as a "two- to five-year process with a miracle every day."

The first step in this process is to join a Conquer Group, which are now offered by churches in over 50 countries around the world.

Men struggling with porn are dealing with high levels of shame and a sense of worthlessness. First Baptist Orlando Adults Ministry Pastor Chris Ogden explains, "For a lot of guys who have struggled in the area of sexuality, the lie becomes: This is just who I am. This cannot change. This will never go away. I might enjoy a week or a month [of sobriety] here or there, but ultimately this is embedded in my soul, and I can't get free of it."

Men who attend a Conquer Group go through a series of exercises, which include a full disclosure of their struggle, uncovering any deep-seated lies that have taken root in their lives, then replacing those lies with the truth of God's prophetic promises found in Scripture. This deals with that shame as Ogden recounts, "As the guys in our church walk through that, you could just see that flame of hope kind of rekindle, and going, 'I not only believe what they're saying is true, but I think it could be true for me.' And I think when that switch happens, that's when God unleashes the power in the guy's life."

While Trump's pledge is a significant move in the right direction, it cannot bring this kind of heart transformation. It can only come through the grace and love found in Jesus Christ, administered through His body, the church.
